Profile of a Graduate

One of the foundational documents of Jesuit education, the Profile of the Graduate at Graduation (more commonly known as The Grad at Grad), reflects the tradition and ideals of Jesuit schools and who our graduates aspire to become. The Profile of a Regis Student at Graduation is summarized under five headings: Open to Growth, Intellectually Proficient, Religious, Open to Others, and Committed to Doing Justice.

Open to Growth

A Regis graduate has an understanding of his unique worth and a perception of his strengths and limitations. Desiring to expand his self-knowledge, he approaches the future hopefully and humbly and is eager to explore the promise it holds for sustained growth.

Intellectually Proficient

A Regis graduate has a growing appreciation for the intellectual life. He has already experienced many of the satisfactions that derive from intellectual pursuits, and has mastered the learning skills appropriate for a person of his age and development. He has encountered ideas and emotions expressed with beauty and power. He has been summoned to refinement of perception and disciplined thinking. He has a more mature grasp of his cultural heritage. New possibilities for self-expression have been opened up, together with growing appreciation of those other worlds which have contributed to and shaped his own. The experience of being sensitized to beauty has unlocked his potential for original and creative self-expression. And his knowledge of Catholic tradition has been deepened within the context of his growing capacity for mature faith. The prospect of expanding and deepening his knowledge is exciting, and he accepts the challenge to employ the tools of learning for a fuller understanding of himself and his world.

Religious

A Regis graduate has grown in his fundamental orientation toward God and toward the Christian community. He has a good knowledge of the heritage and teachings of the Catholic Church; he realizes that commitment to Christ and to others within and outside the Church should be based on personal acceptance of the gift of faith; and he has an emerging conviction that so great a gift must be shared.

Open to Others

A Regis graduate appreciates the worth of his own person and his capabilities, and he appreciates these same values as he finds them in others. His openness to growth, his expanding intellectual universe, and the deepening of his religious faith are freeing him from self-centeredness in his relationships with others. Concerned for them and desiring to express his concern, he begins to realize that the significance of his own life is largely determined by the difference he makes in the lives of other people.

Committed to Doing Justice

A Regis graduate has acquired considerable knowledge of the many needs of local, national, and global communities. Desiring to take a place in these communities as a concerned and responsible adult committed to doing justice, he is developing his awareness and the skills necessary to live as a person for and with others.

REGIS ALMA MATER

Words by John C. Ford, SJ

May ours be the noble heart,
Strong to endure,
Daring 'tho' skies be dark and roadways unsure,
May ours be the heroes part
Ready to do,
We are your sons fair Regis
Our spirit is from you.
Here's our martial song,
While we march along.

May ours be the noble heart,
Strong to endure,
Daring 'tho' skies be dark and roadways unsure,
May ours be the heroes part
Ready to do,
We are your sons fair Regis
Our spirit is from you.
